Conceptual artist Guillem H. Pongiluppi created an epic fan art series for Star Wars and Aliens. The illustrations show Darth Vader and his stormtroopers battling a horde of xenomorphs. There's even one of the Vaders who comes face to face with the Alien queen. This is some impressive bully art and you can see more of the artist's work here. There are segments inside the empire though that are much more formidable, including the 501st Legion, otherwise known as Fist. Artist Vader Guillemhp (real name Guillem Pongiluppi) has created several stunning illustrations of pitting the famous unit against the counter invasion of Xenomorph, the follow-up of his previous Stormtrooper vs. Aliens episode. The 501st consists of some of the most effective soldiers in the Empire, but the sheer number of Xenomorphs prove to be a problem. That's when reinforcements arrive in the form of their leader, Darth Vader. It was here that the ultimate showdown was happening, with Vader staring down the Xenomorph queen. If alien Xenomorphs from Alien Movies ever had to fight Darth Vader, they probably needed to throw everything they had on it. And a new piece of crossover fan art depicts just that. The infamous alien queen Xenomorph of Aliens is preparing for a battle with Darth Vader from Star Wars. Vader doesn't have a giant flamethrower, or machine gun, but he does have a lightsaber and dark side force. Talented artist Guillem X. Pongiluppi published his creation at an art station, and included the signature Get Out of My Troops, bitch!!! in connection with Ellen Ripley's battle cry in Aliens. Although the Star Wars galaxy eventually saw an alien invasion in the form of the Yuuzhan Vong storyline from the Canon of Legends, it seems a little more serious. It's obvious that Vader could have taken the Yuuzhan Vong (if he were still alive when they showed up), but could Vader take on the Alien queen? In remarkable art from Pongiluppi, other, smaller Xenomorphs run alongside the queen. Vader might have been outnumbered. More The most effective thing Xenomorphs can do is to get a person to get a facehugger into his victim's mouth and then that will eventually pop out of his chest. And... it won't work with Darth Vader's mask. Check out The Great Interest of Kiyem H. Pongiluppi here. Some of the recent Star Wars movies weren't my favorites, and sometimes they were totally boring to me. I tell you that it wouldn't be boring - a movie that Vader and some stormtroopers are fighting against xenomorphs. I'd totally go see that. Thanks to concept artist Gillemus H. Pongiluppi, we can now see how this epic conflict can play out as Vader and his army of stormtroopers take on legions of creepy aliens. Of course Xenomorphs bleed acid, and Vader uses cutting weapons, but lightsabers also burn as he separates the limbs, and this will mean no acid blood to eat through Vader's costume. He also has a dark side of the Force looking out for his back. My money would be on the Empire in this fight. (via UFunk through Nerd Approved) saw this concept of art and some comments arguing about the result, so I figured I'd leave it to the pros. Sorry if this was posted before. Edit: Going through the images, he will have infantry with him.
